Trouble at the Shoe Shop

It was the October half term holiday and the children were looking forward to a week with no school. On Monday and Tuesday morning, Daniel, Tina and Thomas were going to visit friends while Mrs Kibble was at work.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Thomas wanted to go and play with Sam again on Wednesday morning. Mrs Kibble had said "no", as he needed a new pair of shoes. She wanted to take him into town. Thomas was upset and didn't want to go.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

At teatime on Tuesday Thomas was very quiet. He wasn't interested in eating his tea. He was even more upset as Daniel and Tina were going next door.

When the family had finished the evening meal, Thomas went upstairs. He sat staring at Bubble and Squeak.

They were running up and down the ladder
in the cage. As he watched the swishing tails and twitching whiskers, an idea came to him.

"I know what I'll do," he said

to himself. "I'll take a mouse into town."

He crept downstairs and shuffled into the lounge with a large grin on his face. He sat on the settee watching television, but he was thinking of his mouse.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

"What are you up to?" asked Mrs Kibble, as she knew when Thomas was up to something.

"Nothing," said Thomas, "I'm just thinking about my new shoes."

That night Thomas got his jacket

ready and stuffed some pet bedding in the top pocket. He hung the jacket on the back of the chair and climbed into bed. Soon he was fast asleep.

Mum called him early in the morning. She needed to go into town as soon as possible.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

The family had breakfast together, then Dad drove off to work and Daniel and Tina went next door.

Thomas ran upstairs and put on his jacket. He reached into the cage, lifted out the sleeping Bubble and popped him

into his pocket. His pocket looked rather funny. It was lumpy and bumpy instead of flat and smooth.

"Let's go," shouted Mum as Thomas came downstairs.

They got into the car and went into town.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Thomas kept his hand over his top pocket. He felt Bubble breathing as he slept.

Mum was very pleased as it was so early. They parked the car easily and walked up the high street to the shoe shop. Two other customers were in the shop. Thomas sat down and the shop assistant measured his feet. He needed a larger size than last time.

By the time Thomas had made up his mind to have the black shoes with wide laces, the shop was full.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Suddenly there was a scream. All the customers turned to look at a lady who stood quite still in the middle of the shop.

"Something white ran in front of me," she said with a quiver in her voice.

Thomas felt his top pocket. There was no lump or bump or breathing. He felt sick as he looked all over the floor. He slithered from the seat and started to crawl on the floor.

"What are you doing?" yelled Mum. "Just sit down on this chair and wait for your shoes."

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Thomas was worried about losing his mouse.

He took no notice of Mum, and ran to the window. A lot of people were looking in.

They were watching something small and white running from shoe to shoe.

"What are you up to?" shouted Mum.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Then she saw the mouse in the window.

She knew what Thomas had done. He was crying and trying to catch his mouse.

The shop assistant ran off and came back with a shoe box. She climbed into the window and moved towards the mouse.

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

Soon Bubble was safely inside the box
and Thomas stopped crying.

"Thanks," he said. "I know I won't bring Bubble shopping again. I'll leave him at home with Squeak. I know that Squeak will have missed him." Thomas walked out of the shop with Bubble safely

hidden in the box. Mum carried his shoes.

Daniel was surprised when he saw them.

"Oh, you lucky thing. You've got two pairs of shoes."

Thomas grinned and said "I know." He

Trouble at the Shoe Shop

ran upstairs to put Bubble in his cage.

That evening he sat cuddling the puppies
while he watched television.

"What now?" asked dad.

"I'm thinking about my Shoes," he said.

But he was thinking of his morning

adventure and one very surprised lady.
